

Warships of Five Powers Manoeuvre Near Dardanelles

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press Staff Writer

BUCHAREST, April 18.—Warships of five powers manoeuvred under secret orders within striking distance of the Dardanelles last night as the small neutral nations of south-eastern Europe reinforced their defences and moved to stamp out Nazi influences within their borders.

LEADERSHIP TO PROVE LIVELY DEBATE TOPIC

candidate in his home constituency of West Valley-Edmonton and was defeated, are said to feel Mr. Gray's claims for leadership should be considered, owing to the fact his action in submerging the Liberal party into the Independent movement made possible the election of former Conservative and U.F.A. candidates running as Independents. Some Unity Council members have been considered if he had been elected, but as the elected independent ran under a non-party candidate, Mr. Gray was not considered.

D. M. Dugan, Edmonton, who has been a member of the legislature continuously since 1928, is receiving generous support for the leadership by those who have outstanding abilities in the house and on the public platform would prove most effective opposition to the Social Credit government and being about to defect in the very near future, the main talking point being made against him for his leadership is that he is in the financial and bond business.

FORMER AFFILIATIONS

The following paragraph gives a brief summary of the previous political activities of the members who will make up the Independent group in the next legislature:

EDMONTON CONSTITUENCY

D. M. Dugan, former Conservative leader and sat in legislature since 1928 general election as a Conservative. In the recent election he was nominated by Conservatives and ran as a member of the Citizens' slate of seven candidates for the five seats available. The Citizens slate was made up of a fusion of Liberal, Conservative and Unity Council members and thirty-eight contributed three and Conservatives one.

Hugh John Macdonald, K.C. H. sat as a member of the Edmonton city council. Was nominated at a Liberal convention and elected to run on the Citizens' slate of seven candidates under the Independent banner. He was the sole Liberal nominee on the Citizens' slate to be elected.

J. Percy Page: Famous as the coach of the Canadian Grange basketball team for many years, he made his entry into politics in this last election. He was nominated by the Unity Council, of which he is the Edmonton president to run as Independent on the coalition Citizens' slate. He was the sole Unity representative in this election.

CALGARY CONSTITUENCY

Major Andrew Davidson: Formerly was an adherent of the Labour party and later of the Conservative party and in the election of March 21, was nominated by Conservatives to run on the Citizens' slate, under a somewhat similar setup to that prevailing in Edmonton in forming the Citizens' slate made up of Conservatives, Liberal and Unity Council.

John J. Bowlen: Elected the legislature in 1929 as a Conservative as a Liberal and re-elected as a Liberal in 1933. Was nominated by Liberals to run on the Citizens' slate in Calgary, but declared himself as a Citizens' candidate before nomination day.

J. C. Mahaffy: Has run on behalf of Conservatives and in this last election was nominated by Conservatives to run as an Independent on the Citizens' slate.

BANFF-COCHANE

OKOTOKS-HIGH RIVER

PEACE RIVER

E. J. Martin: First time in politics, but previous political affiliation reported Conservative.

FERNSBURG

ALLIES ARE BELITTLED IN ITALY PRESS

Four Classes Are Called To Colors In Italian Armed Forces

ROME, April 18.—Pro-German sentiment swept the Italian press yesterday, editorial and news columns alike belittling the Allied military power and playing up Nazi claims of successes in North Africa.

Against this background, the official Gazette last night published a decree formally authorizing the calling up of Italians of four classes, who previously were rejected or only partially trained. This action was forthwith denounced by the press.

NO DEMONSTRATIONS

These affected are the classes of 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914. Aside from the press campaign there was little to indicate any deterioration of Anglo-Italian relations during the last 24 hours.

Investigation failed to confirm widespread rumors of demonstrations against Britain and France in various Italian cities.

British and French spokesmen have attributed the reports to German propaganda agents.

Premier Mussolini's spokesman, Virginio Gayda, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, was among the allies who pursued a policy of sarcastic depreciation of the Allies' military power.

ALLIED SYMPATHIZERS

The newspaper Regime Fascista, owned by Roberto Ruffino, member of the Fascist grand council, criticized Italians who sympathize with the Allies.

Regime Fascista cited an incident in a Milan movie, in which four spectators at a picture reviewed the first six months of the war, was applied "at the wrong time."

This film was composed largely of newsreels showing British, French and German forces in various military movements, before it was withdrawn suddenly.

ONTARIO PLANS TO SLASH 1940 RELIEF COSTS

ONTARIO, April 18.—The Ontario relief board, which has been reviewing the first six months of the war, announced last night relief expenditures by the 40 largest relief municipalities must be cut at least 30 per cent as compared with 1939.

Mr. Cross announced the Ontario cabinet yesterday established a relief quota system, under which, if any municipality exceeded its quota in relief payments, they would be required to make up the deficit.

Under the 40-40-20 system as between the province and the municipalities, the province would get a maximum of 40 per cent of the total cost of relief.

Italy Must Behave as Neutral to Remain One Says Economic Minister

By F. E. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 18.—Ronald Cross, minister of economic warfare, last night called attention to the "hostile" tone of the Italian press and declared in a speech at Sheffield that if Italy wishes to be treated as a neutral she must behave as such.

The 43-year-old minister, who directs the blockade of Germany, said that Germany was making a mistake in not taking Sweden within the next month to obtain her goods. He urged the Swedes not to be taken by surprise, adding: "We are ready to help her, but she must be ready to help herself."

SIGNIFICANT REFERENCE

His reference to Italy were regarded in London as particularly significant, since the Italian people may see as a certain sign of the Italian press this week. He described this tone as hostile.

It is believed here that realization of two facts by Mussolini and the Italian people may see as a certain influence, the extent of the British naval victory over Germany seapower and, secondly, the inability of the German air force to combat Britain's sea supremacy. It is suggested that when these facts are realized in Italy, the tone of the Italian press may be changed.

There are many diplomatic observers here who believe that Mussolini has been drifting with the idea of entering the war on the German side. It may, however, never forget Britain's part in the imposition of sanctions against Italy after the Abyssinian conquest and in addition he apparently believes the overthrow of Nazism in Germany might enervate the Fascist spirit in Italy.

Another theory held here is that Mussolini has something else up his sleeve, possibly a quick raid on Corsica or one of Yugoslavia's northern Adriatic ports, which, with Albania, would give him complete control of the Adriatic. These who hold this theory suggest Mussolini is working on the supposition he can get away with another territorial raid without a major conflict.

Whatever is on Mussolini's mind, the stark direct speech of British blockade director, who usually speaks with the stiff tones of a banker, probably will serve to crystallize the whole situation, which is rather confused and quiet evidence, they say, that he expects to make some sort of official explanation of his general position.

Mental Diseases Not Common Hazards of War Psychiatrist Declares

By J. F. S. CATHART, Chief Neuro-psychiatrist, Veterans Affairs Department

OTTAWA, April 18.—Popular belief is the contrary, mental diseases are not common hazards of war, even for men in the field. Dr. J. F. S. Cathart, chief neuro-psychiatrist of the pensions department said last night.

"If a man is mentally sound when he enters the army, navy or air force, he runs no great risk of having his faculties upset that if he is continued in civilian life," said Dr. Cathart.

The department neuro-psychiatrist said he drew his conclusions from his own findings and those of his associates, Dr. C. H. Archibald, in work among ex-servicemen, civil servants and many private citizens.

Please, Mr. Conant, Stop It

Attorney-General Conant of Ontario thinks it is Canada's mission to coax the United States into the war. He explains this in his own view, not a suggestion made on behalf of the Hepburn Government. The explanation is in order, remembering some recent events, but it does not justify the observation and will not make it either more popular or less liable to produce undesirable reactions.

To most Canadians it is clear, and will continue to be clear, that Canada's first duty at this as at all other times is to mind its own business. It is not part of our business to shape the foreign policy of the United States. And the farther away we keep from showing any desire to do that the better taste they will display, the more highly our neighbors will think of us, and the more sympathy they will have for our attempt to help save Canada and our self-governing people from falling under Hitler rule.

Mr. Conant's speech was a distinct disservice to the Allies in proportion as it may be heeded in the United States and interpreted there as reflecting Canadian opinion. The hope must be that Canadian habits, aims and character are well enough known in the republic that we shall not be rated as busy-bodies and intermeddlers because of this impudent outbreak.

Neutrality No Safeguard

The Allied help now being sent to Norway would undoubtedly have been sent to Finland had Norway and Sweden given right of way for the passage of troops through their territory. In which event the invasion of Norway by Nazi forces could not have occurred, and Sweden would not now be living in hourly expectation of a similar attack. Allied forces would have been present in sufficient numbers to make the peninsula safe.

The Governments of Norway and Sweden could not make up their minds whether the road to safety lay in permitting aid to go to Finland and thereby risking the vengeance of Germany; or in placing Germany by blocking assistance to Finland. Because of their indecision Finland was beaten and robbed, and Norway and Sweden in the one attacked and the other immenely threatened by the unscrupulous aggressor they sought to "apease."

The other neutral states which lie within reach of Nazi forces, and which boast their intention to remain neutral, know that they cannot maintain this position of aloofness longer than Berlin chooses to allow them to do so. They know also that in the event of attack they will be crushed unless the Allies come to their aid. What has happened in Norway and Sweden should show them that neutrality is no defence against Nazi greed, and that indecision is more likely to lead them to distress than to safety.

Laggard Spring

Spring is late in coming to the west. However favorable future weather may be, only a small fraction of the crops can get in the ground before the end of April. The snow is still deep over the central and northern areas, and the thoroughly soaked ground will require several days drying if this were all gone. The west is not being treated exceptionally, however. The season has also been backward in the eastern provinces—and despatches indicate a corresponding condition of things in Europe.

Whatever it may mean in other parts of the world, a late spring does not predict a poor crop in the western country. Heavy crops have been reaped from late sowings. Early seedings have produced some very disappointing yields. The kind of summer has more to do with making the crop than the time of putting the seed in the ground. The chief advantage of an early spring is that it enables the farmer work to be done at a more leisurely pace, and a somewhat larger acreage to be sown.

A favoring circumstance is the abundant supply of moisture. Late winter brought a heavy fall of snow all over the prairie provinces. Experts say there has been a tendency to overestimate the importance of winter snow as a source of spring moisture, that most of the water runs away before the ground is thawed. But the ground was not frozen this year to a great depth, and the run-off will probably carry away less than the usual amount of the snow-water. When the ground is ready to work the moisture supply should be satisfactory.

The Silence of Guilt

In his address to the governors of the Pan American Union, President Roosevelt repeated what he had already said in a press conference — and in notes last summer to Herr Hitler — about the criminality of a government that makes unprovoked war upon a weaker state; and added a congratulatory review of the excellent relations the American republics have created among them because they have the will to live as decent neighbors.

The world is thus again indebted to Mr. Roosevelt for a forthright declaration that moral principles must govern the conduct of nations if they are to enjoy the blessings of peace. There can only be peace on earth if and so long as strong nations deal justly and fairly with weak ones. This cannot be stated too often or too emphatically at a time when certain powerful states have proclaimed their intention to reconstruct world conditions to suit themselves without regard to the rights of others. It is particularly important that the fact be stated by some one whose words may penetrate the official embargo against outside opinion and carry the truth to the people of Germany.

It is significant that the Nazi press set fit to draw attention only to that portion of the President's speech which could be related to the Monroe doctrine for purposes of propaganda. As to what he had to say on the subject of respect for the rights of small nations, the newspaper henchmen of the Fuehrer had no comment. Words failed them when they came to that—the most important—part of the address. Silence on that subject alone becomes the apologists for aggression.

The scientists now tell us we should eat grass if we need vitamins. But they discount the advice by saying we can't eat it green because we are not built that way, and must first convert it into hay and grind it into flour—in which processes it loses most of the vitamins. So after all there seems nothing for it but to stick to carrots.

Two hundred families in the Drumlhel area were driven from their homes by floods. Fortunately no lives appear to have been lost. Those who sometimes enquire what the Red Cross does in the way of rescue work on the home front will be interested to note that the organization was prompt in offering to extend aid to the flood victims. As the Provincial Government had already taken charge of the situation, the services of the Red Cross were not required.

The Maxing Show

By MAX FREEDMAN

Mr. Chamberlain has said this war was caused by the senseless ambition of one man. At first glance this judgment may seem so dramatic and sweeping to commend itself to the impartial verdict of history. But no one can lay down the 34-page paper, "Failure of a Mission," in which Sir Neville Henderson records his experiences in Germany, without feeling the conviction that the capriciousness of the Nazi leader and his little clique of power-busted admirers were responsible for unleashing the forces which sent the world huddled into the vortex of war.

The British ambassador pivots his story about the mood and aspirations of Hitler after the Munich pact had been signed. He believes Hitler was angry with that agreement, because it cheated him of that local war he so much desired in order to provide a cheap military victory for his restless army, and also, because it prevented him from crushing the Benes government, against which he had a violent animus, with brutal and unrelenting force.

Sir Neville repeats the charge he made in his final report to the British government, on giving up his diplomatic mission. Hitler and Von Ribbentrop had reached a frame of mind, after Munich, in which they actually preferred a steady war to a diplomatic victory. A diplomatic triumph no longer sufficed; it was derogatory of Germany's dignity to have other nations sit as equals with her; the Reich's way was to be the way of the victor, and it was necessary to gobble up Poland or any other nation, in fulfillment of its manifest destiny, that was no concern of Britain or France or any other freedom-loving nation.

It was that frame of mind, he said, Sir Neville points out by his facts and observations in Germany, but by the real rulers of the Reich, which precipitated the war.

The ambassador makes one vital point which throws a flood of light on the dark days of the Nazi intrigue and tortuous diplomacy. Most of the Reichstag Deputies and party leaders are said to have been in the Reichstag when Sir Neville's own phrase— "one who owns their present power to Hitler, in reward for services rendered"—was uttered.

THE ASSOCIATES AROUND HITLER

On the days when the Nazi party still suffered from the twin evils of adversity and obscurity, Hitler was the only one who could be said to have a vision of the future. He was the only one who could be said to have a vision of the future. He was the only one who could be said to have a vision of the future.

Himmler and Von Ribbentrop will forever go down in history as emblems of cruelty and deceit incarnate. Sir Neville paints an unforgettable portrait of these two men, for whom he has a contemptuous regard. He says that Goebbels, Himmler, Goebbels, and the Reich leader, an evil bird of prey. He gains what about his power by the knowledge that Hitler must be protected from an assassin, or a mutiny within the party. Absolutely loyal to Hitler but greedy for greater authority for himself, Himmler built up a machine of torture and intimidation that has made him the enemy of freedom and enlightenment.

Here is an example of his power. Following upon the annexation of Austria, hundreds of people were being taken to concentration camps. Sir Neville urged Goebbels to release them, in whom he and the British government were interested. Goebbels did not, but Himmler had them reincarcerated and nothing could be done about it.

Von Ribbentrop is a liar. His advice to Hitler against the invasion of Poland was a masterpiece of deceit. Sir Neville points out that the ambassador's contempt for this spider who was the bitter web of German intrigue across Europe, must be inevitably ascribed to his own cold and summary account.

Goebbels is the creature of the Nazi, according to Henderson's treatment, and an affable and genial in private life. He strangles his conscience, however, the moment he turns to Hitler.

Goring is Hitler's shadow. He loves his leader. Confident that he will succeed Hitler, Goring is content to be the ruthless instrument of Nazi policy. Sir Neville feels Goring did not want this war, but the moment Hitler decided, he had no option but to obey.

And met Goring by the way, he said, at a luncheon in the Embassy attended by Prime Minister Mackenzie King who visited Berlin after the Imperial Conference, Goring was the one for whom Henderson had the most respect.

The rivalry between Himmler, Goring, Goebbels and Von Ribbentrop was not only open and flagrant; it was sedulously encouraged by Hitler. As long as these men were jealous of one another, they could not unite against Hitler to overthrow him. By playing one against the other, Hitler is able to capitalize upon their doubts, while he shall continue to fulfill; the success of that western civilization that has been our heritage for centuries. But we must know that we have paid the very last penny any debt that we may have owed the west—Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustav von Manstein, chief of Finnish army.

Freedom's Price

Some timely truths as to democracy and its meaning were set forth a few days ago by Sir Richard Livingstone, president of Corpus Christi College, Oxford.

The virtue of democracy, he said, is not what it gives the citizens but what it demands of him. It requires of a citizen that he be a citizen, for his own military service and impose a lot of other burdens on himself. By so doing, human character is developed in a way that very definitely does not result from totalitarian government.

"But democracy, like patriotism, is not explained," Sir Richard said, "it gives men the best opportunity of leading the good life, but it is no guarantee that they will lead it."

"It is possible to imagine a State with universal suffrage, social services, economic equality and the rest, where each citizen gives as little and takes as much as he can, content with a world of gambling, cinemas, automobiles, and newspapers exploiting human folly and pandering to his lowest tastes."

"Such a State," he said, "would have democratic forms but no other merit. ... The content and ultimate value of democracy depends on our philosophy of life."—Regina Leder-Peot.

The Dial Will Assist

The women in thirty-nine States across the border have decided to do something about objectionable radio programs. They have organized a "radio dial" in the "New York Times." None is obliged to listen to the weird crime plays originating in the United States. Few want to hear the low-voiced plotting of the gang, the hissing speech of the villain in action, the screaming of the victim, the wailing of the avengers; but children will listen, and the effect on their young minds will be bad. They are the worst and best of the radio, the bold sound—clever, of course—becomes something of a hero.

Radio programs are of many kinds; else why the popularity of the crooner, and of the crude humor, with trained auditors guffawing over revamped jokes? However, all this may be tolerated in preference to the serious, mysterious plays—an episode once a week, so that the occasional listener doesn't know what it all is about; and doesn't care.

Let the producers of such entertainment be convinced that members of these State organizations are not so easily won over by a change. A similar crusade has been effective in clearing the moving pictures of a great deal of their objectionable offerings. There has resulted a vast improvement. Excellent historical and educational pictures are being produced; and so such an extent that theatre patrons may select their own kind of entertainment. The definition of the gangster's dirty work. Here again young people were affected adversely. When they found out that such pictures were not pay there was a quick change to something better. And there will be on the radio when program producers are not so easily won over by a change. The slogan of the public is "no listening." The slogan is apt, and it will be effective.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

LET GOD BE GOD
God is doing something with His world.

This terrible stress and change and suffering, which now afflicts the whole earth, is beyond anybody's understanding. The wisest statesmen, economists, financiers and philosophers confess themselves baffled by the depression and war.

Plainly, a Power beyond mortal understanding is at work in this dark and purposeless too large for any of us to comprehend.

That power, of course, is God. We cannot read His mind, but we can be sure that it is good, and grounded by His fatherly nature.

Perhaps He is teaching us, "with thorns," that the great secret of life is to be found in that our beautiful and God-forgotten human progress is not as wide as it seemed to us, in the light of His wisdom.

For God is jealous of His own Godship. He must be sovereign God of all.

It may be that the Divine plan is to prepare the world, by present adversity, for a new understanding and acceptance of Himself.

Whatever it is that God is doing with humanity, we may be certain that He is pleased with His children who can say, like Christ in the inextinguishable Gethsemane experience, "Not my will, but Thine be done."

We bow, chastened, beneath the overruling providence of our God; sure that He doeth all things well. We pray for grace to let God be God, and to be ourselves submissive children. Amen.

When playing a hand in a trump game you are naturally a little afraid of the suit that may be opened by your partner.

The opening club lead was very much to the advantage. In winning the eastern women's pair championship, Mr. McKenney did just that in the final round.

On the last club lead he made a discard, and you can see his hand. He was sure that the club would have his king. In giving up a small hand he would allow development of the hand to show hearts with his ace and king, and again such a discard would be suggested.

This play is known as the "discard queen" and it is to be used when you should be on the lookout for it.

COMMISSIONER MAKES REPORT ON OIL PROBE

Government Will Study Findings Of Mr. Justice McGillivray

Following 11 months' investigation and several more months in preparation, the report of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on the Alberta oil industry was received Thursday by the provincial government.

The report was prepared and headed by Mr. Justice A. McGillivray, a special division of the Alberta provincial government. Hon. Ernest C. Manning, minister of trade and commerce, said the report would be read and reviewed in detail by the government.

The report was forwarded by Mr. Justice McGillivray to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, who immediately turned it over to Acting Premier Manning.

TWO MEMBERS
The commission, with Mr. Justice McGillivray as chairman, was composed of Mr. Justice A. McGillivray, Mr. Justice L. R. Lipsett, O.B.E., of Calgary, and Mr. Justice A. McGillivray, K.C., of Edmonton.

The report is expected to contain recommendations regarding the prices of fact oil and gasoline in this province and widespread interest has been shown in this phase of the inquiry.

It is thought that the recommendations might bring about a special session of the legislature but this is dismissed in a British Columbia newspaper.

Also it is likely that the report on Dominion-provincial relations, to appear in the next session of parliament, might have a bearing on anything the province might do in regard to the oil industry.

While complete cost of the investigation has not yet been determined, preliminary estimates passed at the last session of the legislature set the cost at $75,000 for this purpose.

Constable Ken Murray of the city police said that Dugan came into the police station and reported the accident just after 11 p.m. Friday night and that Dugan said he did not see the car.

The jury recommended that a sidewalk be built on the south side of the avenue, and that the city improve the lighting and lighting be improved.

Province Renewing Bank Application To Federal House

Action to obtain a charter for establishment of a provincial bank will be taken at the next session of parliament in Ottawa, it was learned in reliable circles here Thursday. Prior to the last session of parliament which was dissolved January 25, Hon. Lucien Maynard, K.C., minister of municipal affairs, had made a trip to Ottawa and discussed preliminary details of the bank charter with officials. With dissolution of parliament these were abrogated.

The new parliament meets May 10 and while it is learned that no definite action has been taken, a new application will have to be made. Legislation authorizing the province to proceed with establishment of the bank was passed at the last session of the legislature, prior to dissolution Feb. 16.

Section 93 of the British North America Act, which authorized the government to apply for and obtain from parliament a charter incorporating the Alberta Provincial Bank, was passed in 1907.

This act authorizes the provincial treasurer to apply $500,000 from the provincial general revenue fund to incorporate the bank and take care of the province incidental to setting up. With George Lougheed, who is provincial treasurer, making a cash deposit of $250,000, which $250,000 is to be repaid by the government, the province makes a cash deposit of $250,000.

The act provides that the bank be a corporation with a capital of $2,500,000, and that the bank be a corporation with a capital of $2,500,000, and that the bank be a corporation with a capital of $2,500,000.

ABOVE NORMAL DURING MARCH

March precipitation in Northern Alberta was 184 per cent above normal, while in central Alberta it was 140 per cent above normal, according to a statistical summary of moisture conditions prepared by the Dominion meteorological bureau.

The heavy precipitation will be beneficial to the crop grain meristems. The precipitation figures are made up of rainfall plus the water equivalents of snowfalls.

In the eight months, August to March inclusive, the northern precipitation totalled 2.3 inches compared with a normal of 8.52 inches or nine per cent above normal. For the same period, Saskatchewan precipitation was below normal, from 10 per cent in the north to 27 per cent in the southeast. Manitoba moisture was also below normal 19 to 22 per cent.
